About the Defense Base Act and War Hazards Practice - The federal Defense Base Act requires all military personnel, contractors and subcontractors to insure their employees for injuries sustained while working under U.S. government contracts or on U.S. military bases overseas. Our Defense Base Act lawyers have deep experience in these unique insurance policies and the complex regulatory scheme that govern them. Even after the initial Defense Base Act claim is resolved, there still may be complex issues to address. Often the next issue is to pursue a recovery from the government under the War Hazard Compensation Act for catastrophic injury, death or enemy detention of contractor employees. We aggressively and efficiently handle both Defense Base Act claims and subsequent claims for War Hazard recovery.
